Kenjiro Okazaki (born in 1955 in Tokyo) is an Artist, Critic and Visiting Professor of Musashino Art University. He lives and works in Tokyo.

Kenjiro Okazaki is a Japanese visual artist whose works span over several genres, including painting, sculpture, as well as landscape and architecture. Many of his works has been featured in public collections throughout Japan and in various exhibitions around the world. In 2002, Okazaki was selected as the director of the Japanese pavilion of the International Architecture Exhibition in Venice Biennale. His works include a collaborative performance 'I Love my Robot' with choreographer Trisha Brown. He received Smithsonian Artist Research Fellowship at Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden (HMSG) in 2014.

Okazaki is also extremely active as a theoretician and critic, and is the author or co-author of several books, including Renaissance: Condition of Experience (Bunshun Gakugei Library, 2015) featuring his analysis of Filippo Brunelleschi, and Abstract Art as Impact: The Concrete Genealogy of Abstract Art (Akishobo, 2018), which received the Minister of Education Award for Fine Arts in 2019.

Two rectangle tableaus with the same aspect ratio, one of which is rotated 90 degrees, are connected. T-SHAPE is created with just this operation.

Hang a tableau on a wall, which automatically has an up-and-down direction. However, if the tableau were hung on the ceiling, no up-and-down direction would be created in this tableau. That is, the four sides of the ceiling painting do not have an up-down distinction.

What is the difference between a tableau hung on a wall and a tableau on the ceiling? It is the body of the person looking at it and the direction of the gravity that restrains the viewer's body that determines the up and down direction of the tableau (as opposed to that up and down order treated as inherent to the tableau).

In short, if our body were in a zero gravity space (whether the tableau is on a wall or a ceiling), it would lose its up and down order.

The startled moths scurry around the flickering candles. With their long eyebrows furrowed, silently, they passed from flower to flower of weeping autumn grasses, Tartarian aster, Gooseneck loosestrife, and Eastern valerian. I saw them as more noble than all the stars in the heavens, eternally circling from east to west. Two hinges align like peacocks' tail feathers in full bloom. An intricate layer is worn by cowrie, a night of rainbow ripples. cella-na and spider conch, saucer scallop, the lucky child. Crimson morning sun, pale yellow moon. The noble father, cradled by the poised mother, rests in the southern sea., 2023

In principle, 3-dimensional space can consist of at least two planes.

When there are two planes, the only clue to spatial orientation will be the relationship between the two planes. The observer comprehends=constructs, and positions themselves in space according to the relationship between the two planes. Then, they define their point of view.

When two identical planes are connected, but one has a 90° turn, the two planes will not be observed to follow the same spatial order. The observer comprehends=constructs, and positions themselves in space according to the relationship between the two planes. Then, they define their point of view. (It is routine on the film screen for the observer to vary their spatial position to the same plane.)

If one is a floor, one is a wall

If one is a ceiling, one is a wall

If one is a wall, one is a ceiling

The line of sight changes its spatial orientation each time it moves between the two planes.

Even though the two planes are juxtaposed on the same plane (the wall), they are understood as two planes with different dimensions (e.g., three dimensions); suggested by the open hinge connecting the two planes, we apprehend and construct a space of composite dimensions.

Many footprints lead into the cave, and none come out. The path to the cave is clear, but the path out is obscured. How do visitors find their way out? The old lion, his teeth and claws worn, not as easy to get food as in his younger days, pretended that he was sick and waited in his cave for visitors., 2023

クルは道に迷ってしまった。どちらを向いても荒っぽい岩山ばかり。ひもじくて水が飲みたくて(カツテモ老人が水ヲ飲ミタクテ若イトキノ島ニ来タママ五十年モ井戸ヲ見守ツタツイウ)、クルは疲れ、うたた寝をする。その間に井戸から水、誰も見ていないけれど、落葉が濡れている。茨の生えたところには薔薇が。不毛の荒地には蜜蜂、危険な道にも草木、断崖には川が流れ、正しきヒトは怒りの声をあげる。痩せ土からも泉は湧く。Kur lost his way. Jagged mountains in all directions. Hungry and thirsty, (like the elderly man who came to this island searching for a drink of water as a young man and ended up staying for 50 years, looking after the well) Kur grew tired and snoozed. Meanwhile, water from the well, though no one watched, wet the fallen leaves. Roses where the bramble grew. Honey bees on barren wasteland, vegetation along dangerous paths, rivers below cliffs, and righteous humans raise their angry voice. And the spring flows out of infertile soil., 2019

"一人でいるときは裸で過ごした。「ここには魚がいっぱいいるんです、たぶん」。自分自身を含め人間の姿などしばらく見ていない。多孔質の皮膚を剥き出しにした岩場まで泳いだ。見えるものすべてが裸だった。世界そして海とは仏陀の裸の体なのだ。私たち魚はその体に包まれている。When I was alone, I spent most of my time naked. ""There's a lot of fish here, I guess"" For a while, I hadn't seen anyone, including myself. I swam to the rocks, which are bared porous skin. Everything I saw was naked. A small boat floats like leaves on the water. Ravens in the sky, crows descending to catch food on the shore. The fish dance and sparkle on the crests of the waves, again and again. When the wind blows a little, you can see the patterns of the waves. The sun is setting, the mountains are purple, and Awaji Island is nowhere to be seen. 木葉のよう小舟みだれ浮かぶ。空にはどこに帰るか鴉、渚に餌を捕ろうと降りたつ鶇。満汐の波頭にきらきら光る踊る魚、幾たびも。風いささか吹けば波の綾も見極められ。日が暮れ繞る山は紫、さすがに淡路島は見えず。、 2023

TOPICA PICTUS is a suite of abstract paintings, each paired with a short essay and reference image(s), which function as key components to provide multi-layered experiences to audiences.

In this ongoing series that now comprises over 150 works since the start of the COVID-19 pandemic, the works were made in response to the unprecedented condition of isolated co-existence, the suspension of time and space, and the perceived loss of tactile or concrete experience, which has significantly impacted our social reality. For the artist, this condition has provided the "possibility of going everywhere because we cannot go anywhere," an opportunity to go on a solitary journey. In the process of making these paintings, Okazaki finds that the multitude of issues that historically face painting is akin to the discovery of a place. Namely, each painting confronts a unique issue and allows for a unique topos (place) to emerge. The term topica in TOPICA PICTUS is derived from Aristotle's Ars Topica (The Topics) on the art of the dialectic, and is associated with topos, which indicates a place. In the course of his work, Okazaki recalled not only art historical objects such as African masks, decorative and colored manuscripts, Kamakura-era picture scrolls, Momoyama-era Japanese paintings, Renaissance, Impressionist, and Modernist art, but also medieval maps, images of Dumbo, Pearl Harbor, and Google Earth.

From March to June 2020, Okazaki sheltered himself in his studio, producing over 150 works during this period of intense concentration. The TOPICA PICTUS series pushes the concept of the Zero Thumbnail series to a new level. The unprecedented motifs, titles, and bold compositions of these new works are full of surprises and discoveries to stimulate us to think afresh from various perspectives.

The work presented in the exhibition are acrylics on canvas in distinctive artist frames. Each is accompanied by an explanatory leaflet: a dedicated essay describing a topic, a feeling, or a framework of thought, shown alongside visuals of artworks the artist believes were created from the same problematic.

Le mur regarde de mon côté. Et ce qui est regardé par le mur, pour l'instant, c'est bien moi. Pourtant, si l'on considère que ce moi est ce mur, moi qui regarde le mur, je ne suis pas là. Ce qui est là, c'est seulement le mur. Il s'y trouve peut-être un moucheron qui s'est posé, ou bien un scolopendre qui avance, ou encore des gouttes de pluie qui s'écoulent. Il se peut aussi que le mur vacille du fait d'un tremblement de terre, que quelqu'un tende l'oreille vers un son en se tournant vers le mur. Pour finir, il est possible qu'un être humain apparaisse et regarde fixement ce mur.

Sur le corps en apparence immobile et silencieux du mur, de tels événements peuvent se produire. La conscience de ce mur est peut-être pareille à un insecte se déplaçant sur ce mur. Pour prendre un exemple, quand on parle face à un mur, celui-ci réfléchit le son émis. Ou bien encore, lorsqu'au crépuscule le jour illumine l'ouest, l'ombre projetée de la végétation oscille à la surface du mur. Dans la mesure où ce mur fait partie du monde, il n'est pas possible que rien n'y entre. Et si l'on s'approche de ce rien, le mur devient au contraire apte à tout recevoir, il n'est plus une simple surface plane dans laquelle rien ne peut pénétrer. Le paradoxe de la méditation, c'est que si on médite au point de se transformer en miroir, ce miroir peut devenir le réceptacle de l'univers tout entier : il est agité comme la terre de la Création, et il se peut qu'il se mette à trépider. Animé du shin'en iba, le Roi Singe bondit ça et là, et le Lièvre rouge (un cheval à la crinière rouge, agile comme un lapin) court en tous sens. Le mur en tant que tel est le substrat de notre esprit (en langage freudien, le « ça »).

Plus de la moitié des toiles peintes par Le Caravage au soir de sa vie mettent en scène un mur rouge sombre devant lequel toutes sortes d'événements tragiques se déroulent. Le mur les observe, et tout en les recueillant, demeure inchangé. Cette impassibilité du mur, qui observe et reçoit tout, fait écho à un épisode sinistre : derrière Daruma qui médite face au mur (au point de devenir littéralement mur lui-même), Eka, qui s'est amputé d'un bras, cherche à attirer l'attention de Daruma dont il souhaite devenir le disciple. Ce que Caravage a tenté de peindre, c'est peut-être ceci : le mur, sans cesse passif, nous provoque.

L'enterrement de Sainte Lucie
Eglise Santa Lucia alla Badia,
Syracuse, Sicile

L'accusant d'être chrétienne, des soldats emmenèrent de force Lucie, mais même attelée à de nombreux bœufs et soumise au supplice de l'écartèlement, elle restait fermement debout, aussi immobile qu'une montagne. Elle fut finalement mise à mort par un coup de poignard dans la gorge. A l'époque où Le Caravage peint ce récit relatant le martyre de Lucie, dont les yeux furent arrachés sans pour autant perdre la vue, il était très populaire. Telle était sainte Lucie, immuable telle une montagne et dotée de la vue même après avoir perdu ses yeux. Le Caravage la dépeint dans une attitude inébranlable tandis qu'on la porte en terre.

Kenjiro Okazaki's relief works were first presented individually in 1981, and later developed into a series between 1987 and 1989. Although the series of reliefs may appear as an iteration of the same shape, the impression felt when seeing each work becomes detached from the shape that is understood as being the same, displaying instead a unique appearance and evoking a memory of a distinct place. Such discrepancy between what is recalled and what is actually seen is a characteristic that all of Okazaki's works share. It gives rise to a strange feeling that different times and places that are supposed to be distant from one another nonetheless have emerged instantaneously right here and right now as we watch.

This series of drawings was created by Kenjiro Okazaki using a T.T.T. Bot (Turning Table Tripod Robot) developed by the artist in collaboration with robotics engineer Katsuyoshi Tsujita. The T.T.T. Bot is a rotating table tripod robot that allows the artist to re-live a painting process by simply touching the board with a pinpoint, without moving his hand as the board itself moves.

First, Okazaki draws an invisible picture on the board with his finger, and records its exact movements, which the board then reverses and reproduces. The artist's brush strokes, speed, angle, and pressure are precisely recorded, and all are completely reversed and recreated as the movement of the board.

Then, Okazaki himself touches the board with his brush and generates the image.

The artist can feel the minute movements of this moving board by just only touching it at a single point. The slight reaction that inevitably occurs at this point creates the touch of the brush. As long as the paintbrush does not touch the board, it only moves and does not produce any visual image.

These drawings are a collaboration between the artist and his past self, incarnated by the moving drawing board robot. Through this technique a painter can collaborate with past masters, but also with his past self.
